STAYING ON THE FARM

The Vermilion school of agriculture has the largest registration of students in its history. That was to be expected. It is a sign of the times and will be stronger if our schools do not also lose their records. Farming in Alberta is a prosperous business. It is a business for young men to get into, not out of. And a business which pays larger profits to those who educate themselves in the best methods of farm practice and management. It is altogether a fact that the farm boys of Alberta have the means and the inclination to fit themselves for life.

NATION WIDE PROSPERITY

From Quebec comes the cheering news that there is practically no unemployment in that province, and that labor is in greater demand than at any time in its history.

To the other Maritime provinces also come reports of a new feeling of confidence that for them, too, has dawned a new era of progress and prosperity. There will be general and genuine satisfaction throughout the whole country to know that the prosperity of one is well with the people in the far end of the Dominion, as they are with those in the western half.

Westerners are Canadians, and if they get no benefit at all out of it they would rejoice to know that their kinsmen in the east are getting it. But the west will profit from the awakening of the west has been a power factor in stimulating industrial and trade activity there. No part of Canada can thrive without helping other parts to do the same. And the west's prosperity is being shared by people from one end of the country to the other is the best possible evidence that it is real and will endure.

INVESTING IN HIGHWAYS

It is suggested that at the coming conference at Ottawa the representatives of the provinces will ask the Dominion Government to appropriate $50,000,000 for highway construction; the money to be paid over to the provinces in a term of three years, according to the amount of standard highway built by each of them. Under a former arrangement the Dominion supplemented the amount spent by a province to the extent of forty per cent. If the same ratio were again adopted, the provinces could, by spending $12,000,000 of their own funds, construct $17,000,000 of standard highway.

These are huge sums of money, but they are not out of proportion to the benefits which the country would gain by them. If Parliament was justified in voting $20,000,000 in 1919 to aid highway construction, a further vote of two and a half times that amount is not only reasonable but a great advantage which are within sight. And if the provinces were justified in spending enough on highways in seven years to secure the $20,000,000 contribution from the Dominion, they would be justified in putting them to the standard during the next three years which would earn $30,000,000 on the same basis of payment.

Official figures just published show that foreign tourists who came into Canada last year in automobiles spent $105,000,000 in their holiday or business jaunts. It is true that the Dominion and the provincial governments collected an amount of this sum directly as revenue. But the amount was distributed among the people of the country, strengthened their tax-paying ability, and thus indirectly helped the revenue of both the federal and provincial governments. It is fairly arguable that this indirect enhancement of revenue paid dividends to both the Dominion and the provinces of the money they spent in permanent construction.

Ignoring altogether the benefits which the people of the Dominion enjoy as a result of highway construction, in the carrying on of business and in driving for pleasure, money spent in this kind of improvement is a profitable investment as a means of attracting tourists. And the profits will in future increase out of proportion to the expenditure. Every addition of miles of highway makes it valuable every mile that has been already built. Tourist traffic will gather like the proverbial "snowball" if we make it known in the United States that our present highway system is only a beginning. And when we are making it larger after year by year, the additional length, thus multiplying the attractions we have to offer the tourist in return for his expense money.

The Fight

By EDGAR E. GUEST

Had once you said I should have made
A great army of the gods, a great army of
Where all the heroines should fade,
And all the heroes should be face,
Making this room a roaring den
I should not have believed you then.

Yet here they battled—Jack and Gene,
In the seventh round Tunney fell,
And the crowd roared, "It's over, it's over,
He's gone!" Rang ten times the starting bell,
One more round, and the fight was over,
Shrieked, raved and cried till it was over.

There on our rug was Dempsey down,
In the seventh round Tunney fell,
And the crowd roared, "It's over, it's over,
He's gone!" Rang ten times the starting bell,
One more round, and the fight was over,
Shrieked, raved and cried till it was over.

And all within my room, where
The great good writers line the shelves,
In the seventh round Tunney fell,
The rose and cheered the men themselves.
Was it Chicago when they fought?
The fight was in our home we thought.

Air Mail

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The first air mail route established in the U.S. was the Washington-New York line on May 28, 1918.

Long flights, however, were more practical than short ones. The first mail was carried in the short flights in taking the mail from the air mail stations to the post offices.

In 1921 the first transcontinental lines were established. At first there was no night flying.

Now, however, the Government has a night air mail service.

In the summer of 1922 a night flight was established over Wyoming. There were no great difficulties.

In August, 1922, trips were made from New York to Chicago, and from Chicago to St. Louis, opposite to the train time of ninety hours.

After many successful flights the time was reduced to forty hours.

On July 1, 1924, the Government went out of business and began to let contracts to private companies to operate the air mail service.

The first mail was regularly carried in 1925 between New York and Chicago.

In February, 1926, the Government closed a contract with the Air Mail Service Company to carry air mail between Detroit and Cleveland on one route and between Detroit and Toledo on another.

On July 1, 1926, the Government closed a contract with the Air Mail Service Company to carry air mail between New York and Chicago.

Amusements

AT THE EMPIRE

A picture offered in the public as a human document is King Vidor's "The Big Parade," coming to the Princess Theatre today. The title enthralles the big heart of humanity right up to the World War, and it is a great picture book.

The coming of "The Big Parade" is keenly awaited, first, because MGM's household—Mayer, Fox, and Stoll—have come to the rescue of the body pictorially his knowledge and skill in the art of making pictures sick. It is a magnificent picture, and it is bound to be a bright among the best of the year.

The comedy creation entitled "One Mamma, Man" with the new star, Maxim Brod, the famous Russian tenor from Moscow, is now in the membership of several American Legion posts took part in the battle scenes, and the picture is a picture behind the lines. That there might be a picture of the gun, Paul M. Malone and his staff at the fort directed the re-enactment of the battle, and the gunner, Husham as the officer of the day, General, and the gunner, General, and officers, in three scenes of "The Big Parade" and the Argonauts, members of the Second Division, U.S.A., who had been led through the Argonne.

AT THE MONARCH

Here's a new way to test the love of your wife. In "Pride and Prejudice," the second, she is sure to refuse to ride. Third, mount your horse, fourth, jump—and edge of a cliff. Fifth, jump—and edge of a cliff. Sixth, jump—and edge of a cliff. Seventh, jump—and edge of a cliff. Eighth, jump—and edge of a cliff. Ninth, jump—and edge of a cliff. Tenth, jump—and edge of a cliff.

That's what Clara does in her latest production, which is now showing at the Monarch.

Young English engineer acts coldly toward his American girl friend, an Hawaiian plantation owner. She is shocked and realizes that he loves her but she loves him not. Clara does her stuff—and the picture is a picture.

AT THE DREAMLAND

One of the outstanding dramas of the season, "The Prince of Headwaiters," is now at the Dreamland. Lewis Stone, Priscilla Bonner, Lillian Tashman, and Bert Lytell are in it. Bert Lytell, heading a remarkable career, is the best comic in the picture.

If you have a desire for genuine entertainment, see "The Prince of Headwaiters." The story is good, the drama is strong. The outstanding comedy angles, Stone as Pierre, the headwaiter of the Ritz in New York.

$25.00

Will be given for the best Two-reel Scenario, accepted and used at the Capitol Theatre, two weeks, commencing Monday, November 14, when the story will be made into motion pictures, right on the Capitol stage.
